alf of the Poor, will probably be best explained by a brief state

About this time last Winter, the unusual cry of want, echoed and recichoed by the Frees, exciled to an intense degree the sympathies of the community, and liberal contributions freely flowed in for its relief, not only from individuals, moneyed institutions, and the City Treasury, but also from different said distant parts of the country, but also from different said distant parts of the country.

The present Winter there appears to be a reaction, in which less than the usual degree of sympathy for the indigent is manifested. This is not attributable to any indisposition to assist the needy, but to the prevailing opinion that the late abundant harvests and revived commercial presperity would provent a recurrence of the distress to which so many the past year were subjected, and consequently that a much smaller amount of funds would be required. This sopular mistake should be corrected. The public will be surprised to learn that, not withstanding the careful discrimination which this system of relief secures, the number now depending upon it for sid, and its expenditures, are shout as great as they were the past Winter, while its receipts have diminished one half. This diminution, however, is less taxed diminished one half. This diminution, however, is less shout as great as they were the past. Winter, while is have diminished one half. This diminution, howevering to a failure of contributions from ordinary sou of the larger donations from public bodies, which as Winter expected. These facts clearly show that it will be judgering poor without greatly enlarged in Eviden-tions.

the referring poor without greatly enlarged in Avidual contributions.

Up to the present, the Association has relieved 6.622 families, containing 26.636 persons, many of whom are faurilies of uncomployed mechanics, and widows with dependent chastron, who eannot subsist without sid. And as the season advances, the amount of destitution will increase. Last Winter it was three times as great in January as in December, and did not reach its high until the close of February.

If a reason for this alarming amount of indisence is sought, it may be chiefly found in the general deficiency of employment, which has now become so scarce as to leave multitudes without work; while, as is well known, the expenses of living are about work; while, as is well known, the expenses of living are about as exorbitant as they were the past year. Hence, multitudes of the irdustrious, self-supporting classes were unable to recover from the impoverishing effects of a disastrous very before they were overtaken by another Winter, for which they were unprepared; and now, having no other resource than gratuitous aid, they must be relieved or perish.

haved; and now, having no coner teachers, the whole they must be relieved or perish. It will be remembered that this organization covers the whole shand, from the Battery to Kingshridge, with its 373 gratuitous whiters, who, so far as the means shall be supplied, will meet very proper want of the needy.

On this brief statement of facts the Board confidently rost their appeal, believing that it will, as in previous years of Provitant appeal, believing that it will, as in previous years of Providently distress, be liberally responded to. For it cannot be that this great city, famed for its benevolence, will allow its citizen to suffer unrelieved.

"Pagers" are running wild—read the following:
An Editor away in Wisconsin thus uses them to express his appreciation of the WIDOW BEDOTT PAPERS:
SONG OF HOW-THE-WIDOW
Should you ask me bow do Wildows
Weave their spell of fascination—
Cain the hearts of second husbands
With the help of sidelong glances.
Caps of starched and crimped cambric.
And the music of sweet monnings
O'er the virtues of the 'lost one'—
Of the husband whose good fortune
Took him far beyond their tongue-reach,
Took him far beyond their tongue-reach,
Took him to that heaven of silence
Where their tongues no more could reach him?
I should answer—I should tell you—
Unto me it was mysterious;
Twas a theme of endless wonder,
Most amazing—meet sateounding—
Far beyond the grasp of logic,
O'r the fight of specialistion,
How a man possessing senses
(Not a swine possessed of devile),
How a man onjoying freedom,
E'er could exactine his latchkey,
And the bliss the roto pertaining
To the keeping of a Widow—

No we two became uproarious.
